

Phu Quoc - The Paradise in Vietnam

Phu Quoc is an island in Kien Giang province looked as a balcony overlooking the Pacific. It is the largest island in Vietnam ringed with some of most beautiful beaches and best seafood. The rugged jungle, pristine white sands and warm azure waters are all things make the romantic beauty of Phu Quoc island.

The fun

Today, Phu Quoc Island is a favorite retreat of many Ho Chi Minh City dwellers, and it's a great place to discover Vietnam outside the big cities. The first-time visitors to Phu Quoc surprise about its sugary beaches and crystal water dotted with traditional wooden fishing boats. Specially in Phu Quoc National Park there has many tree species, species of birds and small mammals such as: flying squirrels and sloth monkeys.

Most foreign visitors say that the accommodations in Phu Quoc are quite though luxurious or modest but give them feeling living in their own house. From the accommodations on the beach, only a few steps lead them down to the white sand and extremely clear blue water. After swimming you can enjoy lots of fresh foods from a family running restaurant right on the beach. You can see Westerners and Asian guest in warming and luxurious restaurants, enjoying coffee while reading books and overlooking romantic see-sight of Phu Quoc Beach.

The unexpected

This area is very quiet and wonderful to forest but if you choose time to travel Phu Quoc Island from July to October, that will be not a good idea. In these months it is mostly rainfall. The best month for you to travel is from the end of October to March when the weather is quite dry, although Phu Quoc has a fairly consistent year around humidity. You should check again carefully before having your decision for visiting Phu Quoc island.

The bottom lines
